

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

1) Is the GPA score based on the weighted or un-weighted GPA?

The weighted GPA will be used to determine if the student satisfies the minimum GPA requirement.

2) Is the GPA calculated based on all my courses or just the courses for the college preparatory curriculum?

The GPA is the cumulative GPA based on all courses taken during high school.

3) If I take the SAT more than once, will my highest combined score be used even if it is from two different test dates?

Yes. The highest score received on any administration of the SAT for critical reading will be combined with the highest score received on mathematics. This total score

4) What if my GPA is over 2.0, but my SAT is less than 700 – do I meet the requirement?

No, you must meet both the minimum GPA and the minimum SAT score to be eligible for admission. In rare cases, a campus may offer a student with extenuating circumstances or with a special talent a waiver from one of the requirements.

5) What if I graduate in 2010, but don't apply to college until 2012. Will I have to have the GPA of 2.0 or 2.3? And the SAT of 700 or 750?

The minimum scores that were in effect the year you graduated from high school will be applied to determine eligibility.

6) What if I decide to go to the community college first and transfer later -- does my high school GPA still count toward admissions?

It depends. If you complete the A.A. or A.S. degree, then the minimum scores do not apply, but you will be evaluated on your performance at the community college. If you do not complete the A.A. or the A.S. degree, then the high school GPA and SAT scores will be used to determine eligibility.
